

LOST IN THOUGHT

The Prix Virginia is an international award for female photographers that recognises the importance of their work in an industry often dominated by men. This page: Cig Harvey photographed a young girl clutching a birdhouse, in a field illuminated by fireflies at twilight, in Rockland, Maine. Top right: Jen Davis's candid self-portrait is taken from a series focusing on her struggle with body image. Bottom right: in the corridors of a remote Swiss monastery, a nun examines a mannequin in a habit, used in religious processions, photographed by Laurence von der Weid. Winning images are being exhibited at Hôtel de Sauroy, Paris, until November 30. Visit: prixvirginia.com

